

Skoda Kodiaq now also available as Sportline

Skoda is expanding the model range of the new Kodiaq to include the "Sportline" variant as top equipment. Black exterior details accentuate the bodywork, while the interior features sports seats with integrated headrests, a sports leather steering wheel and stainless steel-look pedals. Customers can configure the Kodiaq Sportline with all engine/gearbox combinations in the model series. The starting price is 46,490 euros for the 1.5 TSI mild hybrid with 150 PS (110 kW).

The range also has two further innovations. The "Comfort Plus" package is now also available for the Loft and Lounge design styles - previously it could only be combined with the Suite. It includes the Canton sound system, Kessy, electric tailgate operation and electrically adjustable front seats with memory function as well as electrically adjustable lumbar supports. In addition, Skoda's voice assistant Laura now also uses Chat-GPT as a source. (aum)
